

Volunteer Writing Workshop Facilitator Information & Training Application

Please read the following information prior to completing and submitting your application. If you have any questions about facilitation, the training or this application, call 503-796-9224.

Write Around Portland

Write Around Portland amplifies under-represented voices and builds community through our writing workshops, books and community readings. Our work is grounded in our values: respect, writing and community. Our mission is to change lives through the power of writing.

Our Workshops, Books and Readings

Since 1999, Write Around Portland has held volunteer-facilitated, ten-week writing workshops for adults and youth in hospitals, schools, treatment centers, prisons, low-income housing buildings, homeless shelters, senior centers and social service agencies. Our writing workshops are generative, participant-centered and are based on experiential learning. Our workshop curriculum focuses on both generating new writing and developing or revising that writing. The curriculum and our workshop model are flexible to meet the particular needs and interests of a given workshop group. At the end of every season of workshops, we publish anthologies of participants' writing, and we organize readings where participants share their writing with the greater community.

Workshop Facilitator Role and Requirements

The success of our writing workshops, readings and anthologies is made possible by a talented, trained corps of volunteer workshop facilitators dedicated to building community through writing. Volunteers are central to our program's success and act as "the face of Write Around Portland" to workshop participants, our Agency Partners and the public. We provide ongoing support and mentorship to facilitators throughout the workshop to ensure that it is a positive experience for both participants and facilitators.

In our workshops, facilitators write alongside participants through a series of timed freewrites and positive, strength-building feedback. Workshop participants write stories, poems, memoirs, letters and essays, while experimenting with imagery, character development, writing in different voices, dialogue and poetry. Participants, including the facilitator, share their writing and give and receive positive feedback to grow as writers and build a respectful community.

Once trained, facilitators volunteer approximately 5-6 hours per week during the workshop period, which includes facilitating the two-hour workshop session, weekly workshop prep and follow-up time, and weekly check-ins with staff. In addition, volunteers attend facilitator meetings and the book release party and reading at the end of the workshop. Our seasonal workshop networks run in the Spring (February – May) and Fall (September – December).

Facilitator Training

Write Around Portland's facilitator training has been refined over 20 years of experience. This professional, high-quality training is free to trainees. Each year, we hold two, 27-hour trainings for qualified volunteers who are interested in facilitating our writing workshops. The trainings are typically held on evenings and weekends over a 4-week period. We train up to 12 volunteers per training.

The experiential trainings allow volunteers to gain a deep and practical understanding of our values and philosophies. Volunteers learn tools and strategies of successful facilitation, including how to create and sustain a respectful community in which to write and share, managing group dynamics and adapting the workshop to meet the needs of individuals and groups. Volunteers also practice modeling successful workshop facilitation.

Commitment to Diversity, Equity, Inclusion, and Access (DEIA)

Write Around Portland is committed to understanding and changing historical legacies of inequity and patterns of oppression, especially as applied to communities of color. We recognize that working towards equity requires active investments in changing structures and practices to be more culturally responsive. We are committed to advancing racial equity as a foundational element of all aspects of our work, which we believe will also inform our work addressing other inequities in our organization and our community.

We encourage applications from individuals reflective of the full diversity of our community, including people of color, native Spanish speakers, people with disabilities and people living on low incomes. Additionally, to meet the demand for our workshops in Spanish and other languages, we are especially interested in applicants who are bilingual.

Training Applicant Requirements

We are seeking applicants who believe in Write Around Portland's mission, share our values and reflect the full diversity of our community.

Applicants must:

- complete a volunteer application (separate from the facilitator training application) and orientation
- volunteer and/or demonstrate meaningful involvement with us prior to applying to the facilitator training. Our strongest applicants have demonstrated commitment to Write Around Portland's work through volunteering, attending readings and events, writing with us, and/or hosting writing workshops as an agency partner contact.
- have the time, commitment and ability to actively participate in the full 27-hour facilitator training, as well as facilitate a full 10-week Write Around Portland community writing workshop.
- follow all Write Around Portland policies and procedures.
- be able to meet deadlines, turn in paperwork, and follow-through on commitments.
- be able to manage workshop materials and transport multiple bags weighing as much as 20 pounds.
- be able to acquire weekly snacks for the workshop (with Fred Meyer gift cards or reimbursement from Write Around Portland).
- pass a criminal background check annually.
- be at least 21 years old.
- have the following qualities and characteristics:
 - warmth, friendliness and genuine interest in the well-being of others;
 - flexibility and ability to adapt to changing needs or circumstances (e.g. in workshops, with agency partners, with Write Around Portland staff, etc.)

- ability to adapt to groups' and individuals' changing moods, energies and needs, while also maintaining professional boundaries and within the construct of the Write Around Portland workshop model;
- openness and ability to work respectfully with new people and people with diverse backgrounds, health statuses, income and education levels, experiencing isolation, or those who may otherwise face barriers to writing in community;
- ability to create and maintain personal, professional and organizational boundaries; and
- represent our organization well to our participants, our partners, and our community.

Our strongest applicants have also:

- demonstrated a solid connection to Write Around Portland as a volunteer, donor, participant, partner; commitment to continuing that connection in a substantial and meaningful way, ideally for the long term.
- shown an aptitude for facilitation, including a good sense of how to engage and lead groups respectfully and sometimes through awkward or unexpected situations.
- been able to “read a room,” interpret physical cues, body language, and interpersonal and group dynamics.
- handled a significant amount of paperwork, with an attention to detail.
- experienced a Write Around Portland workshop, for example as a volunteer scribe or workshop participant (in our community writing workshops, workshops at HOTLIPS Pizza, Prompt at Powell's, etc.).

Important notes regarding the training application process:

- Write Around Portland is grateful for the significant interest in our workshops and the large numbers of individuals who apply to be trained as workshop facilitators each year. However, we are limited in the number of applicants we are able to accept. We try to make the best possible matches of facilitators and specific workshops; therefore, our selection process may reflect less upon a specific applicant and more on the needs of our organization, agency partners, participants or workshops.
- To run up to 50 workshops per year, we need a large pool of previously-trained and newly-trained volunteers. Therefore, we are limited to training only those individuals who are strongly interested in and capable of facilitating workshops with and for Write Around Portland. We are unable to train individuals who do not intend or do not have the time to facilitate workshops with and for our organization. Because of the careful choices we must make as a small nonprofit organization with limited resources, we ask that potential applicants take the same care in choosing whether or not to apply for our training.
- We appreciate every applicant's interest, and we welcome and encourage you to participate in other volunteer activities in our organization, whether or not you are accepted into the facilitator training.
- If selected for our training, trainees must attend and be on time for every training session. Active participation in every training session is mandatory to successfully complete the training. Please contact us for training dates and times to compare your schedule and ensure your availability.
- Completed applications are due in our office by the specified application deadline. Applications received after that time will not be considered. If the applicant requests, we may consider the late application for the next training. We accept applications by email, US mail, fax or in our office.

Thank you for your interest in Write Around Portland! We look forward to receiving your application, and we will contact you about next steps in the application process at that time.
